Deep South: Kooddoo to Gan

Kooddoo to Gan | Huvadhoo, Fuvahmulah and Addu

A week of channel and drift dives, riding the current beside pelagic life with a front row view of its behaviour.

The Huvadhoo channels are a world famous dive area, with silvertip, hammerhead and bull sharks and large schools of grey reef sharks.

In the evening, night snorkelling off the back of the boat brings whale sharks, with a good chance of more than one visitor.

Fuvahmulah offers oceanic depths and tiger, whale and thresher sharks, and the week ends in Addu Atoll with the best hard corals and giant mantas at the cleaning stations.

What the week holds

A week of channel and drift dives, riding the current beside pelagic life and getting a front row view of its behaviour.
The route includes the Huvadhoo channels, a world famous dive area with silvertip, hammerhead and bull sharks and large schools of grey reef sharks.
Fuvahmulah Atoll brings oceanic depths and unbeatable conditions for tiger, whale and thresher sharks, black oceanic mantas and other pelagic fauna, and for many divers it is the most memorable dive in their logbook.
In the evening the crew moves to the back of the boat for night snorkelling with whale sharks. There is a good chance of more than one visitor, and if you stay up late a one to one encounter is possible.
Addu Atoll has the best hard corals, great sightings of giant mantas at the cleaning stations, and the British Loyalty, the biggest shipwreck in the Maldives, which you can explore.

WORTH KNOWING

Key notes

Good to know

Dives are limited to 30 metres. A dive computer is compulsory, and diving alone and decompression dives are not allowed.

Good to know

Night dives and dives deeper than 18 metres are for advanced certified divers, and you can upgrade your certification on board.

Good to know

Many sites on the Deep South routes are swept by very strong currents, so these cruises are recommended for divers with an advanced certification and at least 100 logged dives.
