Deep South: Male to Kooddoo

Male to Kooddoo | Central atolls, Meemu and the Huvadhoo channels

The central atolls start the week with colourful pinnacle and wall dives, and at night curious nurse sharks and stingrays come to the lights.

A day in Meemu Atoll brings encounters at the manta cleaning stations.

Further south the channels take over, with strong currents that attract rich pelagic life and almost untouched corals, deep caves and unusual formations.

The Huvadhoo channels hold silvertip, hammerhead and bull sharks and large schools of grey reef sharks, and in the evening whale sharks come to the stern for night snorkelling.

What the week holds

You start in the central atolls with colourful pinnacle and wall dives, and in the evenings night dives bring curious nurse sharks and stingrays to the lights.
A day in Meemu Atoll brings unforgettable encounters at the manta cleaning stations.
Further south the channels take over, with strong currents that attract rich pelagic life.
The route includes the Huvadhoo channels, a world famous dive area with silvertip, hammerhead and bull sharks and large schools of grey reef sharks.
In the evening the crew moves to the back of the boat for night snorkelling with whale sharks.
There is a good chance of more than one visitor, and if you stay up late a one to one encounter is possible.

WORTH KNOWING

Key notes

Good to know

Dives are limited to 30 metres. A dive computer is compulsory, and diving alone and decompression dives are not allowed.

Good to know

Night dives and dives deeper than 18 metres are for advanced certified divers, and you can upgrade your certification on board.

Good to know

Many sites on the Deep South routes are swept by very strong currents, so these cruises are recommended for divers with an advanced certification and at least 100 logged dives.
